These provisions are salutary and are thoroughly justifiable in view of the great svils and abuses which have so long prevailed in bankruptcy matters and which ave latterly brought about a state of affairs which the Government very rightly coustderet it could not longer stand by idly and see existing without an effort to remedy affairs and protect honest enterprise by the provision of some protection against fromdulent traders. The penal provisions, it is recommended, should be extended, and their enforcement be made less expensive. Several matters made offences by the English Act of 1883, should, it is re commended, be made similarly punishable here, the most important of these being such cases as those in which the bankrup has continued to trade after knowing himself to be insolvent. Several other difficulties are proposed by the Commissioners to be removed by the insertion in the Ordinance of various new provisions, the object and tenor of which we shall indicate in a further reference to this most important Report under review.

UPPER BURMAH. Since the collapse of Theebaw and of his army, we have had little enough good news of any kind to chronicle, but at last a piece of really good news has reached us from Mandalay. The iniquities of the Tinedah have found him out at lest, and he is now a prisoner under a guard of Blue-Jackets Mandalay on 27th instant, arriving at Thayetmyo yesterday in the Panlana, so he has had just about a month of the unmerited honour of strutting about as the press. That month's employment of such a ruffian is a blot on the English name which it will not be easy to wipe away; but it is at an end at last; and we trust that the Tinedah will now receive the reward he has so richly merited. His career has been a chequered one. Springing into notice seven years ogo, he rose rapidly to the highest offices under Theebaw. With the collapse of that Monarch it was supposed the Tinedan must also sink, but, to every one's intense surprise. he came to the surface again under English rule. Now he is down again and we sincerely hope that fate has no more slevations in store for him, unless it be an elevation to the gallows. That would be a fitting end to his career, and a striking example of the ups and downs of life.

We have no positive information as to why Colonel Sladen has thus hurled the Tinedah from the pinnacle on which he speak ; but it is probable that his complicity in the murder of the unfortunate European employes of the Bombay Burma Corporation has been discovered beyond doubt. Few people have ever doubted that he was mainly responsible for that foul outrage; and if that really be the cause of his imprisonment, we trust that his punishment will be something more than simple captivity.—Rangeon Gazette, Dec. 81.
